

Williams out —Searle back?

WYCOMBE Wanderers will be without their consistent mid-field man Rob Williams tomorrow (Saturday) when they visit Southbury Road for an Isthmian League match against Enfield. However, the chances are that returning Keith Searle will be in the side.

Williams started a two week suspension on Monday, for his three bookings this season and therefore misses tomorrow's game and next week's home encounter against Bromley.

This means Wycombe will probably move Paul Birdseye into midfield and bring in Ian Rundle to the full back position. Much depends on the fitness of Dave Bullock, who suffered a cut head at Leytonstone last week. If he is unfit, then Rundle will partner Delaney at centre back and Keith Blunt, who filled in at Marlow on Tuesday, will come in at full back.

Upfront, Keith Searle is available for the match and the player likely to drop out is Tony Amos. Although he tops the Wanderers goalscoring charts this term, he has been through a poor spell recently and could well be substitute tomorrow.

If so, it will leave the way open for Searle to renew his old partnership with Tony Horsman, the combination in fact which took Wycombe to the league title last season and scored many of their 102 goals.

Much will be expected of Searle but it could take him a while to settle into the swing of things again.

A glance at the league table sees Enfield in their lowest position for many years, after being at the top for so long. They are now in tenth place but have scored the second highest total of goals in the league, only two less than runaway leaders Hendon. However, they have also conceded a fair few and this has been their downfall.

The team, in fact, is not much different to the one that drew 2-2 at Wycombe on September 9. Tony Turley scored the two goals then and has emerged as their top goalscorer this season with a massive 31. John Brooks, recently capped against Scotland, is second with 24 while John Butterfield, another international, has 17.
